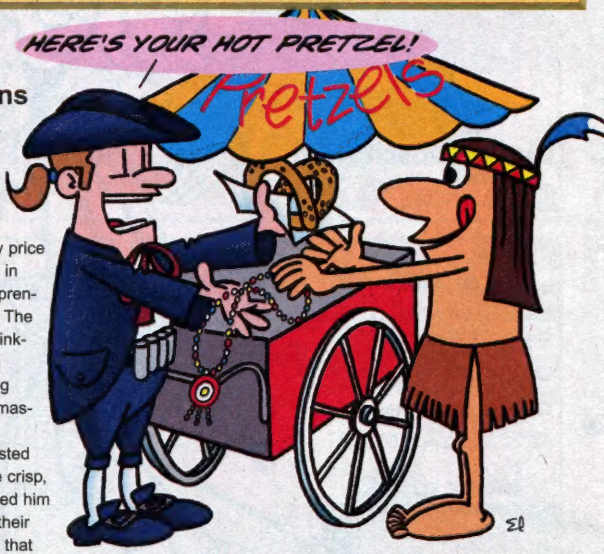
Pretzels

By Jeremy Elkins
Northbrook, IL



Historians believe, although cannot authenticate, that the pretzel came to America by way of the Mayflower in 1620. There are stories of early settlers selling the treat to Native Americans, who would pay any price for them. The hard pretzel had its beginnings in Pennsylvania. One story tells of a baker's apprentice who dozed off while baking soft pretzels. The fire in the hearth died down and he awoke, thinking that the pretzels had not been baked long enough. He fired up the furnace again, baking them twice as long as necessary. When the master baker found out, he was outraged at the "ruined" pretzels. Then, out of curiosity, he tasted them. To his delight, he discovered they were crisp, crunchy and delicious. What especially pleased him was that the new hard pretzels also retained their freshness much longer. Another legend has it that the recipe for hard pretzels came from a hobo passing through town who exchanged it for a meal. From this sprung the entire industry as we know it today. By 1960, total pretzel sales reached $92 million. In the mid 1960's, pretzels were the fourth most popular snack in the U.S. Today, the center of pretzel history in America still resides in Pennsylvania, where the first commercial bakery was founded in the small town of Lititz in 1861. Pretzels come in all shapes and sizes, flavored and unflavored, salted and unsalted. They are still one of America's most popular snacks.

Mountain Men

By Dominica Broom
Wautauga, TX

They wore fringed buckskin clothes decorated with porcupine quills. Around their necks, they carried sacks filled with salt, coffee, tobacco, gun powder, and other necessities. They ate whatever they could catch or gather, including buffalo meat, root berries, and even ants. During the harsh winters, they often lived with Native-Americans, who taught them survival skills. Mountain Men sometimes would make soup from their moccasins when they couldn't find anything to eat.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Dear Archie Readers,

I wonder how many of you enjoy shopping. Shopping, especially for clothes, is not one of my favorite things to do. Food shopping, for some reason, I don't mind as much. In fact, I'm pretty good at finding tasty, free samples. That's what makes clothes shopping so unpleasant. Bigger waist size. Which leads me to tell you a little bit about the next issue of BETTY & VERONICA (#168). It seems that Veronica has been "Sleep Shopping," which is the title of this story. It's bad enough that Veronica can't do enough shopping during the day, now she's doing it in her sleep. Her father after seeing all her bills will definitely have insomnia. Can Veronica's best friend, Betty, keep her from shopping in her sleep? Also in the same issue, as long as we're on the subject of shopping, Betty and Veronica decide to surprise their friends and family by preparing one huge Thanksgiving dinner. Needless to say, they shop till they drop for all the food and fixings. They have so much food that they have to do all the cooking in a secret location. However, they forget one very important ingredient. You'll find out what it is when you read "Thanks For The Giving." This issue is on sale next month.

JOSIE & THE PUSSYCATS meet up with an all boy band, "Donnie & The Dogs." They sabotage the Pussycats in the middle of a benefit concert tour. Their nasty tricks won't stop until Josie and the girls learn a secret that could send Donnie & The Dogs off to the pound. Don't miss "Bad News Boys" in ARCHIE & FRIENDS featuring JOSIE & THE PUSSYCATS #53.

NEWS FROM THE ARCHIE WEBSITE: Here's some great news for all you talented readers who have been sending in FAN ART. As you probably know, and I think I've mentioned it, we receive hundreds of submissions every week. It's impossible to publish all that artwork in our comics. We pick the best of the best, 'cause we think all the art is the best. But what do we do with fan art that we can't publish? We decided to put it up on the ARCHIE WEBSITE. All you have to do is go to our website (archiecomics.com), find RIVERDALE HIGH SCHOOL, go to the ART ROOM and look for your fan art.
